

Workshop: How to perform (and publish) a research review

Ernesto Panadero, Researcher at Universidad Autónoma de Madrid and Honorary Professor at Deakin University, Australia

While conducting a dissertation it is crucial to understand the state-of-the art of research on the thesis topic. If this review is conducted in a systematic manner it will increase the chances of getting published. This workshop will explain all the different phases that need to be followed and explore what to do to increase your chances to write a potential manuscript to be published out of your review.
